But he conceded that Washingten and Jerusalem have an "understanding — mere er less" about the scepe of U.S. assistance to Israel.

Arabs threaten Israel with war, Egypt with sanctions

Jerusalem Post Staff and Agoneics

Threats of war and terror against Israel and economic canettona against Egypt were made in a number of Arab capitals over the weekend as the prospect of the immi-oent signing of an Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty continued to arouse the Middle East.

In Damaseus, the official government newspaper "Tishrin" warned yesterday that the signing of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty would 'leave no choice to the confrontation states of the northern front (Syria and Iraq) but te go to war."

This threat coincided with a report in the Kuwaiti daily "Al-Siyassa" elaiming that three Iraqi divisions bave meved into Syria in the past few days as part of the agreement between the two states to units milltarlly.

In Israel, military eeurees predicted yesterday that the signing of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty will spark bostilities on the eastern front with Syria.

The sources, quoted by Israel Televisien, said Syria and Iraq have secretly agreed to expand their present, lew-key military cooperation should a peace pact be concluded. The agreement provides for Iraql army units to be stationed in Syria boosting the cembined ferce facing Israel en the eastern front. PLO leader Yasser Arafat was quoted yesterday as eaying that "the whole Middle East will explode" once the peace pact is signed. He teld the Paris-based international supplement of the Beirut weekly 'Al-Nahar'' that be had eent formal ietters te the beads ef ail ellproducing countries calling fer a pan-Arab embargo against Egypt because Sadat agreed under the terms of the treaty to aeii eli to Israel.

He reminded Cartsr, Sadat and Begin of the wave of political assassinations and coups d'etal that swept the Arab world after the signing of the 1949 Arab-Israeli armistice agreements. "Thie will happen again if a separate peace treaty is signed," Arafat warned.

But asked whether the PLO was willing to negotiate peace in collec-tive Arab talks with Israel, Arafat replied that "I want to declare that we are prepared fer anything through the United Nations."

There is real concern in the Strip as to how uch an autonomous administration could kasp Gaza economically afloat once military govern-ment is abolished. Ten years of military ad-ministration has resulted in Gaza being inexalone, over IL800m. was pumped into municipal projects, bealth, education and social welfare services, and agriculture.

The queetion many Gazane are asking themselves today is, who will foot the bill once Israel turns off the financial tap? It is unlikely that the oll-rich Arab states will come to Gaza's aid, particularly if Gaza is seen as collaborating with the peace accords they so vehemently oppose. Whether Egypt, saddled with its own buge economic burdens, would seek to extend any largess to the Strip is questionable. The responsibility of the UN relief organization is only to the refugee Camps.

So far there has been no mention of the U.S. sending aid, at least directly, to Gaza. If Israel is to remain Gaza's chief patron, how much autonomy will Gaza really have, it is asked.

"Whoever controls the purse strings here will control public opinion," acknowledgee one municipal leader.

Another question is what kind of currency the new administration would use. Most Gasan officials say they would like to get out of the in-flationary orbit of the Israell economy, and be freed from the Israel pound. But they admit to not knowing which currency would serve as a

The Minietry of Agriculture yesterdey explained the new policy with regard to egg production, in which subsidies were eliminated and price control lifted, by saying that for years there had been surpluses of eggs that had to be exported at a loss. All previous attempts to keep the production of eggs within the limits of domestic demand by administrative measures had falled. It was therefore decided to abolish price control, so that the return to poultry farmers for excess produc-tion of eggs will fall.

The government will assist poultry farmers in the mountain settlements in order to increase their competitiveness, but the Poultry Marketing Board will buy surplus eggs only at a price that does not exceed direct production costs. Histedrut treasurer Netban

TEL AVIV. - The magic word "peace" once again exerted a strong influence on the activities of the share market.

At the heginning of the week shares drifted lower as the public waited anxiously while negotiations werc carried out under total hiackout conditions. But Wednesday, when it first became apparent that the peace treaty with Egypt will be signed, marked the beginning of a spirited rally.

Not only were the iosses registered early in the week wiped out, but there was a 1.6 per cont overall gain in the sbare index for the week. Advancing shares outpaced declining ones by a ratio of more than 5:1.

An outstanding increase was achieved by Azorim, which gained more than 17 per cent in the wake of an exectient balance sbeet. American Israell Paper Milis and Clai (Israei) Investments each gained more than 10 per cent.

Most observers had anticipated a rise in the order of 3 per cent. Ancient Israel also had 'strategic settlements'

By SRAYA SHAPIRO

Jerusalem Post Reporter TEL AVIV. - The strategically movable nature of Israelite outposts in the era of early settlement, more than 3,000 years ago, was outlined by scholars at the sixth Israel Archaeological conference, held at Tel Aviv University last week.

Engaged in life-and-death struggie against the Cana'anites in the hills and the Philistines on the coastal plain, the ancient Israelites established semi-fortified villages on strategically situated headlands overlooking the large towns or fortresses of the enemy. But when the political altuation changed, the inhabitants of these outposts would move into the more civilized centres.

That is what happened; for instance. at Izbet Sarta, which overlooked the prosperous centre at Apbek, near the Rosb Ha'ayin springs; Israel Finkelstein pointed' out. A similar strategy was noted by Amihal Mazar at Glio, now a Jerusalem suburb. Fortified when the Jebusites held Jerusalem, the place was abandoned after Investors and securities analysis are now trying to focus more clearly on which share sectors are most likely to benefit from a peace economy. There is littic doubt that construction, tourism and defence-oriented enterprises will be major beneficiaries during the intermediate period shead. In spite of the inherent risks involved in erystal-ball gazing, a number of shares seem to have the potential of being among the major winners in 1979. The Elron group of eompanies should be a major par-ticipant in large and profitable defence contracts. Elbit Computers will benefit from the sale of computer control systems to the Israel air force as well as for the tank There is also every reason to suspect that Solel Boneb will particlpate in the redeployment activities which will follow almost immediately after the signing of a peace treaty. If the expectations of a major increase in tourism are fulfilled then there is expected to be a continued high rate of inflation. Investments in index-linked bonds will adequately provide protection against the loss of value of savings in that case, Our local currency, It would appear, will continue to lose ground against the dollar and therefore some form of dollar investments are warranted. (Wall Street - Page 4)

Israel Land Development, which manages botels, should participate favourably. Accompanying the peace economy

Court allows Avital to send Anatoly a ring — if NY Soviet envoy agrees

NEW YORK (AP). - A New York State supreme court judge has ruled that Avital Shcharansky may ap-proach the Soviet mission here today and attempt to deliver a wedding ring to replace the one confiscated by Soviet authorities when they jailed her dissident husband, Anatoly.

On Friday, the judge approved a one-time only exception to a 1971 court ruling that restricted the size and location of damonstrations outaide the Soviet mission. Mrs. Sheharansky will attempt to deliver the ring at 11:30 p.m. Israel time today after a rally across the street which is to be sponsored by the Student Struggie for Soviet Jewry.

The judge specified that Mrs. Shcharansky and a delegation of two or three other persons may go to the mission door with a polica escort. Mrs. Shcharansky, a 28-year-old textlla designer who livee in Jerusalsm, is visiting New York specifically to deliver the ring. Shcharansky, a 81-yaar-old mathsmatician and activist, is eerving a 13-yenr prison term for treason. Mrs. Shcharansky has not seen him since she was forced to leave the Sovist Union on July 5, 1974, the day after their wedding.

"This approach shall be for the sole purpose of attempting to hand a wedding ring to an officer of the mis-sion," the judge said. "There shall hs no carrying of signs or packages." The 1971 ruling by a state supreme court justice requires that there be no more than 12 demonstrators and that they stand at least 100 feet from the mission and remain within police harriers, Identify themseivee to police and submit to searches.

Ruling on Bhutto

execution stalled

RAWALPINDI (Reuter). - The Pakistan Suprema Court yesterday reserved judgment on a patition from condemnad az-Premler Zulfikar Ali Bhutto asking it to reverse its decision to send him to the gallows.

The court said it would need at ieast three or four days to prepare its ruling. If the petition is rejected Bhutto, 51, could be executed seven days later.

Bhutto was convicted of ordering the assassination of a political opponent when he was in office in 1974. Last month, the Supreme Court rejected his appeal against the death sentence by a 4-3 majority. The defence lawyers believe there is little chance of the court acquitting Bhutto, but think there is a slight hope that the sentence will be reduced to lifa imprisonment. They are hoping that one of the judges who dismissed the appeal will change his mind.

There is a strong lobby among Pakistan'a generals to execute Bhutto, but informed sources say hundreds of junior officers have signed petitions urging Pakistan'e ruler, General Zia ul Haq, to commute the death sentence.

waiting. It is the only way to make a good brandy." Monnet rarely took direct political action, but daveloped the art of making friends and influencing people. For five decades, he counted leadars of the non-Communist world among his close personai friends. Presidents Franklin Roosevelt, Dwight Elsenhower and John Kennedy, Gen. George Marshall, Ganerallesimo Chiang Kal-shek, liked and admired him and turned to him for advice. He developed the revolutionary theory that culminated in the Com-

Although European governments are a iong way from accepting a supranational body which could make decisions over individual objections, the community now makes hioc procedural decisions in some areas, and there is some sympathy for increasing its power.

the Jows are the bitterest enemies of Moslems,

"You will most certainly find the bitterest enemies of the faithful to be among the Jewe and the non-believers, and you will most certainly find the most cordial people to Mosiems to be among those who profess being Christian because they include priests and monks and arc not arrogant," Tclmissani quoted the Koran as stating.

The brotherhood's membership is not known, but in the 1950s its followers numbered more than two million.

Teimiasani insisted that a peace treaty can only be accepted if it is hased "not only on regaining the Arab lands lost in the 1967 war, but on regaining the state that the Palestinians lost in the 1948 war with lsrael."

The anti-peace outcry was also echoed by the new Wafd party, which dissolved Itself last year to avoid alleged harassment hy the government.

"Egypt may win Israel as a friend, but it will certainly iosc the friendship of all its sister Arah countries once the peace treaty is eigned," a Wafd member said. He asked to remain unidentified.

CAIRO. - President Ja'afar Numeiry of Sudan, a nation at the crossroads of the African and Arah worlds, appears to be facing a developing crisis. Hie problems lie ln food and fuel shortages, labour un-rest, border tensions and growing political division.

Wastern diplomats express concern that the ferment could result in the loss of another pro-Westarn regima. They note that Numeiry has eurvived similar crises in the past,

Egypt's leftists, Moslem Brothers, Oman badly shaken by Iranian 'earthquake'

By NICHOLAS MOORE, Reuter MUSCAT. - Nowbere has the fall of the shah aroused greater concern than in the Sultanate of Oman, just across the mouth of the Gulf from the Iranian upheaval. "Strategically, Oman is a plum," a foreign diplomat in Muscat said thla month, "and it feels threatened."

Whoever rules this rugged land has his hand on the oil-bungry West's "jugular vein" — the Strait of Hormuz through which giant euper-tankers leave the Gulf. The narrow deepwater channel is close by the Omani shore.

Across Oman's southern frontler is Marxist South Ysmen. In the late 1960s and early 1970s, when South Yemen backed a leftist rebellion against the Omani Sultan, Iran sent troops to heip him. Now, however, the shah's fall appears to mean the cnd of Iran'e role as policeman of the Gulf.

Oman, with between 750,000 and one million people, sprcads along 1,600 km. of the coast of couthern Arabia.

it is, after Saudi Arabia, the Arahian peninsula's eccond higgeet country and is the Arah world's only Sultanatc. A sultan, as a king, is addressed "Your Majesty." The land is one of lofty, barren crags and green oases, watered by irrigation ducts from underground wells first tapped 2,500 years ago. It has been renowned for centuries for dates, frankincense and racing camels.

Omani ships rode the monsoon to Zanzibar in the first century of the Christian era and, in the 1700s, the Sultanate built an empire down the East African coast. Its rakish sambouks formed the most powerful fleet in the Arabian sea until, in the 19th century, the empire crumhled and the bomc country slid into decline.

Oman, 10 years ago, was the Middle East's most backward land. The left-wing insurgents of the Popular Front for the Liberation of the Occupled Arabian Gulf (PFLOAG) controlled much of the southern Dhofar province.

Despite the 1967 commercial tapping of oil, Oman had just three schools and one hospital, no major highways and no private cars under the rule of the ageing, miserly and feroclously conservative Sultan Said Bin Taimur

But in 1970, he was deposed in a palace coup by his son, Qaboos Bin Said, returned from graduating at Britain's Sandhurst Royal Milltary Academy. A taciturn, elegant man who studies mliltary history, Sultan Qaboos has been likened to one of Europe's 18th century "enlightenad despots" - even to his passion for Haydn, whose stately music is piped through loudspeakers at Seeb International Airport.

cruelly blinded by trachoma. The disfigurement is not svident among the young, at least in Muscat. A deepwater port opened in 1974 and iast year imported nearly 18,000 vehicles, 80 per cent of them from Japan. Other projects include a desalination plant and mining of copper, of which 20,000 tons will be produced next vsar.

Oman is not, however, a wealthy country. Production costs are high for its 300,000 harrels a day of oil and it has had to borrow more than $100m. from Saudi Arabia to finish Its road-huilding programme.

Along with iran, Britain aiso helped fight the insurgents and lost 11 men killed.

Although they withdrew militarily from the gulf in 1971, the British kept discreet residual presence in Oman with which they bad formal links dating back to 1800. A treaty of that year required that "an English gentleman of respectsbility should always reside at the port of Muscat." The two powers would remain friends "till the sun and the moon cease their revolving career.

On a recent state viait Queen Elizabeth sald Britain was glad to have met a request for continued support for the Sultan's 13,500-strong armed forces, in which nearly 500 Britons still serve.

Arabia's need for a strong and stabla Egypt is so great that it would not cut off aid (as It has threatened), even if Sadat signs the treaty with Israel.

This ssems a misjudgment. In the current climate of the Arah world, the Saudis perceive greater danger to themselves in any sncouragement, however discreet, of Sadat's compromises than in letting him face alone the consequences of his policies.

In trying to hustle Sadat back from the brink of a separate peace, the Saudis have had It much in mind that such a peace could well provoks an Islamic backlash in Egypt. The Moslem Brothers, once tamed hy Nasser, are speaking out boldly now, and their potential for bringing mobs on to the streets is undoubted. Such nuruly agitation has no appeal whatsocver to any Arab government, including the Saudi. The fact that protest is helng mobilized under the banner of Islam makes it far more difficult to combat openly than if it were, say, Marxistinspired.

Moreover, the Islamlc groundswell, so dramatically excmplified in Iran, is reviving in tha popular Arab mind the romantic idea that a people's war against Zionism could be waged successfuliv. Traditional regional confiiets linger between Moslem Arabs in the north and Christian tribes of African origin in the autonomous couth, even though Numeiry succeeded in anding a 17-year civil war in 1972. Six of Sudan's eight neighbours are either angulfed in wars, threatened by instability or hostile to Numeiry'a government. His closs ties to President Anwar Sadat'e government in the north are viewed with suspicion by soms political opponents.

Numelry's opponents seek to capitalize on two issues: the economy and his support of the U.S.mediated Egyptian-Israell psace treaty.

Chief among the opposition figures is Sadek Al-Mahdi, leadar of ths rightist Umma party which favours eloser adherence to Islamic traditions at home and a non-aligned foreign policy.

Sadek, a 42-year-old former prime ministsr, is a great-grandson of the Mahdi who set up an Islamic state after defeating the Britisb under Charles "Chiness" Gordon at Omdurman in 1884. He told a news conference in London recently that the Camp David accords were "treason." He said Numeiry's support of Egypt's peacemaking with Israel prompted him to end a brisf rcconciliation attempt with Numeiry. Numeiry fresd 1,000 political prisoners and reached agreement

Numerry and Sadat: a fraternal hus with all major political factions except the Communists. He promised free elections and political reform and his opponents agreed to work within the single-party systam. But slections bave not been beld and opponents say Numeiry has retained repressive powers. "There is no room for a national econelliation with Numeiry now," Sharif al-Hindl, extlad leader of the Democratic Unioniat Party, was quoted as saying in a recent magazine Interview. Al-Hindl, a formsr financs minister, has assailed "rockcting inflation" -- eatimated at a 20 per cent annual rate — and alleged mishandling of a $6b. national development acheme.

Adding to the economic woes is a 40 per cent hike in gasoline prices and rationing of fual, which has forced the national airline to cancel or delay flights.

Primary school tsachsrs, who number 45,000 nationwide, struck in January over pay and promotion policies and 5,000 bank employees, demanding wage hikes of 10 per cent and housing allowances, walked out last month.

Universities, a traditional centre of anti-government agitation, have also begun flexing their muscles. About 8,000 students, inspired by the Khomeini revolution in Iran, poured through Khartoum's streets last month, ebanting "the fate of Numsiry is the fate of the shah."

Numeiri, an affahie 49-year-old army officer who came to power 10 years ago via a hloodless military coup, has also suffered setbacks recently in his efforts to leasen border tensions.

The most notable was the failure of the Etbloplan-Sudanese cummit earlier in February in Slerra Leonc. Sudan has supported Eritrean secesaionists against the Soviet-hacked regime of Ethiopian leader Mengistu Haile Mariam who has given refuge to Sudanese dissidents. Chad, Uganda, and Zaire, all neighbours of Sudan, bave been enguifed hy conflict. Relations with another neighbour, Lihya, have soured over the Midcast peace initiative and other issues.

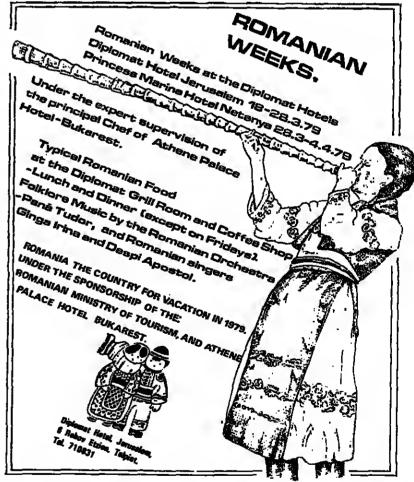

Only Egypt has remained firmly allied and the two Nlie river couptries hava mapped out elaborate plans for "integration" and evantual union. Both Sadat and Numeiry have turned to the West after falling out with the Soviet Union.

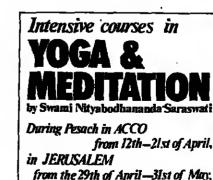

The diplomats say the collapse of Numeiry's regime could be a direct threat to Egypt and "a bad blow to American prestige" in view of the fall of other pro-Western regimes in the Mideast and Africa.

The same diplomats also note that Numeiry does have the firm support of the Sudanese military and the middia class and bas proven himself adept at juggling the regional and factional disputes.

"In general things look grim," said a diplomst. "But for a long time Numeiry bas kept the halls in the air and hasn't dropped one yet."

Calcutta curry and Kerem calf's foot

KEREM HATEIMANIM - the Vineyard of the Yemenites - has produced soms fine fruit and occasional sour grapes. It is the famous Yemenite Quarter of Tel Aviv, bordered by the Carmel Market, that permanently rumbustlous happy happening; the greyer Allenby Road; the Rehov Hakovshim-Manshiya slum; and the disintegrating picturesqueness of Shabazi and Neve-Zedek. But it is much more than just a geographical connotation on the city map. It remains a framework of reference for one of the most fascinating of our ingathered tribes and it has become a signpost marking the changes wrought on this remarkable community by the Israeli social pressure-cooker. (It was the founder of this newspaper, the late Gershon Agron who coined the phrase - that if the US had the social melting pot, Israel has the pressure cooker.)

There is no space bere to enumerate the Yemenite contribution to our society, It is only necessary to remark that It is way, way beyond their proportion of the population. One sees their imprint on so many areas, from dance to music, from arts and crafts to fashion, and certainly not least, on food. The exotic beauty and gracious movements of the Inhal dancers are part of their communal heritage. The annals of Israeli song and dance can be gauged perbaps in the light distance between the style and techniques of the early Shoshana Damarl and the Eurovision smoothly-sophisticated numbers of Yizhar Cohen. In sc many ways our Yemenites their intense loyalty to their closed matriarch-dominated families, their clannlshness and their fidelity to ancestral religion and ethnic traditions. Their influence on show business is another parallel, as are the unorthodox means wherehy soms of the aons of communities of such high native intelligence have managed to overcome their parental disadvantages in climbing up the socio-economic ladder. But the Kerem has its dark side too, and it has known the sounds of gun shots at the hlack of night.

That is one reason perhaps why so many of the younger families have gone elsewhere to raise their children, while keeping a special place in their hearts for the Kerem. The great pride of the neighbourhood is naturally its football team, Inlmshon, which helongs neither to Hapoel nor to Maccabi, and enjoys the financial support of the local businessmen and the atallholders in Carmel Market. But most of its players and committee members have also moved to other parts of town. The age level of the Kerem's inhabitants is rather advanced today, as the Yemenite elders cling to their Innumerable synagogues, sach reflecting a thousand year-old tradition of prayer from a town or village back in Yemen. . Though much of the Kerem has fallen into neglect, and too many of its roads are in a scandalous state, one encounters in its narrow lanes well-tended houses with preity trellised halconies bursting with flowering plants.

This state of neglect is mourned by Zion Levi, who more than anyone eise deserves to be crowned the "King of the Kerem." He is the busy owner of the best known restaurant in the Kerem which — naturally — bears his name. Today heris at 42 a wealthy pater-Tamillas, who plays liest to many of our VIP visitors in his "Zion Exclusive" restaurant, and travels to work in a blg car from his villa in Herzllya Pltuach. It is a far cry from his early days, when as the son of a market porter father of eight - all living in one room - he decided after ending his army service to open a small eating placs in the Kersm. It was four by four metres and the place cost him IL3,000. That was 23 years ago and he offered inexpensive Yemenite home cooking - the first in the Kerem in fact to enter the restaurant business. He got his mother to teach him how to prepare and cook the special Yemenite soups with calf's foot, oxtail and bones. Business thrived and his old pais from the Nahal days who since made names for themselves in show business like Haim Topol and Uri Zohar began to frequent the place which now expanded a bit more. time. The book contains compliments from such VIPs as the ex-Queen of Italy, Marla Gabriella of Savoy, Sir Harold Wilson, US Senator Riblcoff; the late Iranian chief of staff and numerous visiting dignitaries. I recall taking Virgil Thomson, the doyen of American composers, there for dinner during his 1974 visit here, and he was delighted with the exotic amblance and splcy food. Part of the success must be attributed to the affable maitre d'hotel Hanni Gabareh, who makes guests taste his special delicaties like recycled olives, onions and radishes as sweet desserts.

eighth time running first prize for popularity in the "Yediot Aharonot" contest. He puts It down to decent food, good service and reasonable prices. It too has expanded its original premises, spreading along Rehov Plduyim, as he buys out his neighbours. Two of its walis bear paintings (on board covered with plexiglass) on Yemenite themes done in 1967 by Itamar Slani, an artist of Yemenite origin who has since made a reputation for himself. Because Zion and other restaurateurs want to maintain their considerable volume of business, they do not have too many Yemenite dellcacies on their menus; that is left to much smaller places. Across the other side of the Kerem is Shaul's Inn, which is popular with tourists, especially its posher downstairs eating place. But aside from a Yemenite soup or two, its closest association with that community is the stereotype Yemenite plus payot depicted on the menu. Besides such East European delicacies as Chopped Liver, and Central European dishes as Wiener Schnitzsl, Shaul's Inn offers the usual oriental/Balkan fare of most eating places of its kind in Israel. Its price was average - IL200 per head - for that kind of place, what I ate was tasty and the place, (including most importantly the lavatories) was scrupulously clean. That is something, belleve me, in this part of the world, Cleanliness is also a fsature of Zion's and other places I visited in the Kerem.

A bigger restaurant, which resembles some of the popular places I used to frequent in Athens, can be found accross Rehov Hakovshim, named Gamaliel. It is more reasonably priced, spotlessly clean with first. class (polite!) service, and a big range of meze-style bors d'oeuvre. But its connection with Yemenite cooking is about as tenuous as Shaul's Inn, except for the origin of the owner of course. Zion too offers Sini'ya (minced meat baked in Tehina) which is an Arab dish. It should he stressed that they are all strictly Kasher.

My recent visit to "Zion Exclusive" was not happy, largely because of the buge quantity of chopped parsley covering the meat course, which brought one to wonder whether the cook was hiding something. As to my latest meal In Zion proper, the chips were very tired indeed as if they had had an exhausting day, and the salad was tasteless, while the call foot soup was delicious. Our English guesi was a hit taken aback by the item on the menu "Eggs of Adult Ox - In Extent," which | translated back via the original Hebrew, to mean "Bull's testicles, prics according to size" — which is the precise version I saw at another place. That, as our friendly waiter explained with explicit gestures, was regarded as an aphrodislac by the cognoscenti. (I liked the way they translated Ful the bean disb intr Full Beam).

Zion kindly gave of his busy time to explain his mother's recipe for calf's foot soup: Take a calf's foot, after cleaning it up and making it kasher, boil it for half an hour, and throw away the sediment. Then put in salt and pepper t taste, onions, slivers of garlic, Corcum cumin, kusbara and a spoonful of tomate pures. Leave it overnight on a low hest. / similar recipe also to oxtail soup, it seems.

Zion is convinced that Kerem Hateimanin could become as attractive a place as Athen's Plaka, and people would be drawn to shop and all kinds of boutiques, if only the officia policy of studied neglect stopped. He had dis cussed the matter with Mayor Lahat and Deputy Mayor Griffel on frequent occasions but nothing had budged in the municipa bureaucracy. The quarter's roads have remained in a state of disrepair, adding to the atmosphere of neglect. He has really prayed that plans for restoring the older quarters like Neve Zedek would get underway, for tha would make the Kerem Into its entertainmen centre, and increase pressure on City Hall t do something about the neighbourhood.

Zion was the pioneer and others have followed his example in opening restaurant in the Kerem, with chairs and tables in th streets.during the hot summer nights.Som places have since closed and their premise are now occupied by artisans, But smalls places like the Hirbeh and Magaden flourish, as do eateries specialising in fish an grilled msat dishes.

One favourite is Shimon, but It only open for lunch. It is a tiny place just down off th street up nearer the Market from Zion. The you can get original Yemenite home cooking

Admittedly it is all a far cry from Mrs. Levi's home cooking on which her youngest son founded his fortunes. Zlon was again in the newspapers this month when his restaurant (the original Zion) won for the

with all the sharp spices like khilbeh as s'khoug. (A warning: their taste remains one's palate for a few days thereafter.) Whi wandering in the Herem, I learned to what content it is one big family, with everyone knows and the second ing all that is to be known about everyon's and else's affairs. Solmon, for example, have intermed to a former Inbal dancer, and the same and have seven daughters, which has brought the local people to nickname him "Hatsaya" (Skirt), in keeping with the oriental view that not to have a son is a calamity.

ginger, Judah soaked dried ginger in water for a few hours. "Never," he warned, "use ready-ground ginger. No taste."

The amount of the spices used in the vindaioo were oot prceise, but they would certainly suffice a western cook for a few months at ieast. "Peei another garlic," bc calied out to his wife, Suzanne, after tasting the vindaloo.

"A clove of garlie?" she asked. "Of course not," he laughed, "a bead of garlic." Judsh, a hydrographer underwater geographer), lives in Haifa with his wife and two children. His wife does the day-to-day cooking, but he obliges with meals for special occasions and weekends. During the course of one of these meals, his friends usually tell him that he must stop wasting his talents and open a restaurant, but Judah replies that cooking is far too much work to do as a job. In Calcutta, he points out, preparing meals was not so complicated. The servonts did much of the work, leaving the finer points of preparation to the mistress of the house.

His mother was the deecendant of a long line of rabbis who had come to India from Baghdad, his father come from Germeny. But, he added, it was his mother who decided what went on in the klichen. In addition to the usual dishes she also prepared the food of the Calcutta Jewish community, a cuisine with roots in the Iraql origin of Its membera, as well as Indian overtones.

Judah himself ean prepare about 100 different curry dishes, all using varying combinations of spices. Like most expert Indian cooks, he usee no "eurry powder." If I used curry powder, all the food would taste the same," he saye.

But bis reai iove is obviously Csicutta Jewish cooking, a cuisine which, in its heyday, only encompassed some 15,000 to 20,000 people. Now, there are only a few hundred Jows left there. Most of them went to London, Australia and Los Angeles. Only five families came to Israel, he

One typical dish was hari kebab, in which pieces of chicken and whole peeled onions and notatoee are bathed in a mixture of spices and roasted in the oven. The pan is first covered to allow the spices to permeete the meat and vegetables and theo uncovered to make it erisp.

The spices for this dleh are turmerie, bay leaves, eardamoo, cloves, ginger, garlic, cinnamon and pepper corne, "with a pinch of nutmeg." Desoite the profusion of soices, the resulting dish is mild and quite delicate in taste.

Another dish, of aimost surprising simplicity, was to be found in every Indian Jewish home on Friday night. Jewish chutney included fenugreek It consists of whole peeled potatoes seeds which had been soaked in pierced all over their surface with a fork and then deep-fried in very hot oil. As prepared by Judah, the potatoee had a lovely brown crisp erust, with the insides soft and fluffy. However, Judah said, when the dish was orepared for Shabbat, it was left for as long as a few bours in the pan, which was placed in the bot ashes of the cooking fire. As a result, the potatoes would coak up all the oil, which would literally burst out when one bit into them, Judah said. Prepared in advance were two churneys, one an Indian churney made with fresh ecconut, mint leavee, iemon juice, fresh coriander (kuzbara), ginger, garlic and salt. A

Finally, just so the guests would not go hungry, Charles Judah allow-ed his wife to make a cauliflower bagi, in which the vegetable is cooked in oil and a little water with fennei seeds and black cumin, an oriental spice often used to decorate bread.

For Judah, the meal was a window back on the past, where such dinners were a daily occurance. Not only was it usual to have a selection of such magnitude, he stressed, but all the dishee were made freshly for every meal. There was no such thing as left-

In general, one should cook with little water. Vegetables steamed in their own julce with just a drop of water are very tasty without the ad-dition of salt, while grilled meats and fish retain their full flavour and rarely need additional sait. And remember: nover salt meat and fish before grilling. Visits to the recent Food Fair and to various food factories have revealed a number of new products soon to come on to the market. Since this is the citrus season, let us start with fresh orange juice in cartons, to be sold for IL12 a litre. PARIS (UPI) - The new 1979 Michelin guide book, highest French restaurant authority for gourmets. recentiy elevated two restaurants in France to the highest three-star category and demoted one three-star establishment.

The Restaurant Lameloise in Chagny, and the Boyer in Reims, formerly two-star establishments, received their coveted third stars in the latest edition of the red book. The awards added food prestige to northern France, previously weak on Michelin's list of great restaurants.

The Barrier in Tours lost its third star and was relegated to the twostar category - stili coveted - in the 1979 guide

The six three-star restaurants In Paris remained the sams as in 1978 Grand Vefour, Tour D'Argent, Archestrate, Lasserre, Taillevent and Vivarois.

The minor shakeup meant a net gain of one three-star restaurant for France, a total of 19 compared with 18 in the 1978 edition.

In the two-star category, France still had 65, the same number as last year, a balance of additions and deletions.

Other oew two-star restaurants outside of Paris were L'Olivier in Beziers, Auberge du Cap in Fleurie, La Cremalliere and Porte Barentin in Oriesns and Auberge St. Jean in St. Jean-de-Blalgnac.

The oew guide indicated that jucuisine in France, far from being downgraded by the growth of fasttof 3,631 restaurants were listed with stars of leaser crossed-fork ratings as compared with 3,447 in the 1978 edition.

Petah Tikva Happel callsd the tuns against Jorusalem Betar, but failed to turn this superiority into goals. Betar seemed to be playing at half pace in the Petah Tikva sharay, and Malmillian and Neuman were rarely at their best. Betar took the field without key players Jano and Kirat. Ell Mialy scored Betar's winner in the 52nd minute, after receiving a pass from Yoeel Avrahami.

In a morning game, also in Petah Tikva, the home Maccabl opened in an attacking formation and this paid off in the 7th minute when Herzl Pitussi gave them the lead. In the 16th minute Ronen Rockman put Haifa Hapoel levsl, from a pass by Shlomo Shticker. In the 27th minute Avraham Goldberg regained the lead for the Petah Tikva side with a kick that goalkeeper Weinberg could only divert into his own net.

In Kfar Sava, two mistakes by goalkeeper Zwi Poznansky resulted In goals for visiting Beersbeba Hapoel. In the 10th minute Uri Benyamin took a free kick from 20 metres which Kfar Sava's goalie should have beld and in the 21st minute Ya'acov Fulberniss' shot went right through Poznanskl's hands, to give Besrsheba Hapoel a 2-0 lead.

With this advantage, Beersheba Happel played a sound defensive game in which Shmuel Biton and Alon Bendor were best. In the 80th minute. Israel Vogel pulled a goal back with a fine shot from 16 metres, but all out Kfar Sava pressure failed to put them on level terms. Maccabi need miracle to make final

By STEVE KAPLAN Post Sports Reporter

Aside from salvaging some lost pride, Tel Aviv Maccabl's 100-75 win over Roal Madrid in last Thursday's final round game of the European Basketball Cup of Champions did little to soothe the sense of loss in the Maccabi camp.

With one game left in final round play. Maccabi is left with little chance of getting to the final game. If Bosna of Sarajevo loses to Olimplakos of Athens in Greece, and If Real Madrid loses at home to Emerson Vareas, theo Tel Aviv Maccabi will take Madrid's spot against Emerson in the champlonship game on April 5th in Greooble, Franco.

Tel Aviv Maccahi coach Ralph Klein was in sombre mood after his team's blitz of the Spanlards, saying: "It was a great win for us over the defending European champlons, but I am afraid it was too little too late. We needed games like this one earlier in the season.

Indeed, bad Maccabl beaten Olimplakos in Greece, the picture would bave been entirely different. Madrid would have come here needing a loss by less than 14 to stay in the running. and Thursday night's game would bave been the typical tension-filled cootest that local fans are used to.

The performance of both teams in the first half of the game on Thursday did nelther team justice, as the level of play bardly resembled that of two of the best tsams in the European competition. Maccabi was still trying to regain its confidence after the disastrous 18 point performance in the first half against Varese, and Madrid was very far from being the team which heat Maccabl 90-76 in Madrid. The Spaniards could not get their fast break going, missed shots from sasy situations, and showed a general lack of interest in what was going on during the game. To their credit, the Maccabi players came out after the intermission and found thamselves, playing as well as they have all season. Boatwright and Sliver combined for a series of jumpshots, and the much harried Paul McCracken broke loose for some easy baskets as the Israeli team showed the form which the loyal fans have been waiting for all year.

Barring a miracle in the European Cup, Tel Aviv Maccabi'e only challenge now lies in retaining Its league and cup titles. Last week, Yagur Ha'emek Hapoel became Maccabi's opponent in the semifinals of the league playoffs with an npset 73-71 victory over Halfa Happel on a basket in the final seconds by Boaz Yanai, the team's star. The Hapoel club will start a best-of-three saries against the defending champions tomorrow night in Mishmar Ha'emek,

In the other semi-final round game, Ramat Gan Hapoel and Tel Aviv Hapoel face off in a best-ofthree saries which could be full of suspense. In their last encounter, in the semi-finals of the State Cup, Ramat Gan Happel scored the last 15 points of the game to defeat the Tel Avivians. Tomorrow night the teams play in Yad Eliahu, and anything can happen. The State Cup finals will take place on April 9th at Yad Eliahu. whers Ramat Gan Hapoel and Tel Aviv Maccabl will face each other for the third time this season.

Autonomy debate can wait

THE GUSH EMUNIM tail continues to wag the body which is the Natinnal Religious Party. The issue now is the Cabinet's intended debate on the autonomy scheme.

For months Prime Minister Begin was able to suppress attempts by snme of his Cabinet colleagues tn obtain a clear definition of the Government's views and policy on autonomy before concluding a peace agreement with Egypt. Mr. Begin realized that such a discussion could not only alienate some of the Cahlnet members, but also make it more difficult to pursue the negotiationa with Cairo. He beld off, and wisely so.

But in moilify the hawks be agreed in hold such a discussion in the Cabinet before the treaty with Egypt is finally signed.

Nnw this promise has come back to haunt him. His difficulty no longer lies with the more obstreperous Cahinet members from his own Likud Party. Arik Sharon, for example, apparent-ly awung fully behind the Prime Minister in the final round of talks with President Carter and his support nn doubt made It that much easier fnr Mr. Begin to accept whatever compromises he felt necessary. But the three ministers of the National Religious Party feel the whip nf the Gusb behind them and they are pressing not only to have a full Cabinet discussion, hut they will also advance a set of policy guidelines which their party would like to make a conditinn for support in the Cabinet and Knesset of the peace agree-

Since the nature of the autonomy scheme is, by agreemeot, to be a subject of negotiation between Israel, Egypt and, if they jnin, Palestinian representatives, one month after the peace treaty la signed, a Cabinet debate would at this point only be an exercise in domestic party politics. It cannot lead to a hinding declaration of policy, for that would make a mockery of the negotiation process that is supposed to ensue.

The question, therefore, can rightfully be asked whether some right-wing rbetorical flourishes now about autonomy which can only serve to emharrass President Sadat, President Carter and Mr. Begin on the eve of the peace treaty signing in order to satisfy those in the NRP cowed by the assertiveness and threats of Gush Emunim can be justified as responsible government action.

The religious party's leader, Dr. Josef Burg, has already gone nn record as stating that the agreements to which the Government consented in the talks with Mr. Carter are fully consistent with the Camp David pacts to which he and his party gave their assent in the Knesset last year. If that is the case, then there is no reason now to put any spokes in the diplomatic wheel hy an autonomy dehate which no one in the Cabinet really wants.

The proper time for clarifying the Government's position on the autonomy scheme is after the peace treaties are signed. Then there will be a month in which the Cabinet will be obliged to prepare for the negotiations that lie ahead.

But here too that process will bave to be conducted with an eye to encouraging the normalization of ties with Egypt. The simple procedure of Jews arguing with Jews will not be adequate.

That aimless procedure we have witnessed ever since 1967. It is the achievement of this government to have opened the way for Jewish-Arab, or at least Egyptian, dialogue. That achievement cannot be forgotten when the subject of the dialogue will be autonomy.

It would certainly be eclipsed if the terms of the dialogue were to be determined by Gush Emunim and others who totally reject the hreakthrough that Mr. Begin has accomplished.

WEHN is a yored not an emigrant? The answer to the question is, when he or she obtains quasi-official eanction for staying on as an Israel emissary or representative with one of the many Zionist/Jewish communal/Isreeli agenciee/officee on an open-ended never-never hasis. The opproval, et the most with quasi-official connivance for reasons of protektzia, or et the least out of ebsent-mindednece, has enchied many people (come estimate the figure in the thonsands) to become yordim in the most convenient manner. Yerida without pain, so to speak, not to mention the pangs of e iying Zionist conscience.

The difference between these people and those fellow citizens who heve chosen to leave us for other lands is that the letter do not pretend to be anything else. Neither do they speak on Israel's hehalf. Nor do they preach Zionism to the local Jewish community.

They turn inside out the classical definition of Zionism as the territorial concentration of the Jewish people in their own sovereign homeland. The diverse agencies of the World Zionist Organization, the fund-raising drives, the various Jewish communal hodies and governmental subsidiaries overceas are being used as a means for dispersing Israelie throughout the Diaspora. It is high time that this issue was discussed openiv Instead of providing material for julcy gossip — namely that these agencies are eerving as a cosy conduit for yerida.

My two years' stay in London and visits to other world centres over the years have hrought home to me how well the condult is operating. On a number of occasions I found myself emharrassed and nonplussed hy the leading questions posed hy my local Jewieh hosts, who responded pointedly to my talk of their community's deplorable aliya record. They would reel off the namee of Israelis who had come there originally as emissarice or representatives and to all intent and purpose have settled down there for good.

ONE PERCEIVES the human motive - of staying on and on in such comfortable berths, the oppor-tunity to rub shoulders with VIPs, and other kind of tangihle and intangible perks, all as a result of using the local community's regard for Israel.

It is also a case that the longer someone staye away the harder It is for them to fit back again into their original Ieraell backgrouod and place of work. Thus it becomes a kind of vicious circle, albeit wellpadded. The lengthler the stay abroad the more difficult the readjustment.

I remember discussing the withdrawal pains - so to speak from the Diaspora, with frieods among the diplomats at our Loodon only their fear of losing touch with the homeland hy staying eway too long, but their concern over their children's education and the effect on their uphringing of protracted residence abroed.

On the whole it is my impression that the Foreign Ministry pursues e sensible assignment policy. Yet there are cases where it may he asked how representative and indeed effective an official spokesman for Israel could e man he who has hardly visited this country for 10 years?

I am thinking of the case brought to my ettention by friends from a major U.S. east coast community where the Israel Consul-General is doing a five-year term after having spent e previous five years on assignment in e Far Eastern capital. Far be it from me to make generalities ebout our Foreign Service in this connection. Though questions did come begging after meeting cases where former senior diplomets chose to retire sbroad, raising a query over the tenuousness of their original coonection with this country.

A few random examples of how the conduit to yerida works will il-lustrate my point. I do not have eccess to precise statistics hut some of my informants have apprised me as to the discouraging number of Zionist emissaries who opt to stay put in the U.S., for example, when their terms of duty come to an end. For leck of space I would single out disparate cases I personally know of in New York. One part of a couple got a etudent visa while the other half helped support the household hy getting a joh with the security men guarding Israell institutions. As the student continued to work on her Ph.D., the hushand managed to graduate to other work, after the security joh cushioned his introduction to America. Their talk of an Impending return home has hecome very low-key.

ISRAELI culture in the U.S. is spoken for hy a former Israeli woman married to an American citizen, and she is among those running the show at the America-Israel Cultural Foundation, This woman makes occasional sorties to Israel and after two decades of resideoce in New York still claims to speak for the cultural life of Israel, of which she knew little even hefore she left for Americe.

London's Rex House - the main ceotre of Israel-oriented and Zionist activity - is rampant with yordim on the payroll. Both senior officials of the joint World Zionist Organization-Zionist Federatioo Education Department are former Israells, now permanently settled in Britain. But then that Is also the case on other floors of that building on Lower Regent Street.

SUCCESSFUL AUTONOMY

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. - In his article of March S, Walter Eytan argues that eutonomous regimes never lasted and never will: elther they were swellowed up by a neighbouring country, or they became independent Eytsn Ignoree one case of successful autonomy — namely that of the Aland Archipelago of Finland. Aland, with its 6,500 islands and 1,481 sq. kme., got its ontonomy from Finland in May 1920. The population of the islands is 99 per cent Swedish speeking and the Archipelago helongs more to Sweden hy its language, race and geographical location. It enjoys nearly the same autonomy which Israel is ready to give to the West Bank and Gaza with the difference that it is forbidden to the difference thet it is forbidden to build Finnish settlements ond schools on the islands and to sell land to mainland Finns. There are no Finnish army bases there and the residents are exempt from military service. The Aland Archipelago is completely neutral and demilitariz-ed, but still helongs to Finiend.

SOLAR ENERGY

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, -- Professor Alvin Radkowsky presented very well and very convincingly the case for nuclear power ("Nuclear power and freedom," March 6). However, he could have done it without downgrading the prospects of solar energy. His statement thet "photovoltaic cells require the production of highcloss and expensive forme of silicon" is obsolete. David Carlson and his team at RAC's Princeton, N.J., research centre eucceeded in producing colar cells from thin films of cheap amorphons silicon (instead of the expensive crystalline one). Moreover, there are other even more efficient photovoltaic cells under in-copper sulfide cells discovered 20 years ago have been recently vastly improved, gallium arsenide cells show great promise). Furthermore, besides photovoltaic cells, there are many more promis-ing epproaches to the utilization of solar energy, which the space here does not allow to describe in detail (power tower, solar ponde, evacuated tubes, radiation funnel, synthetic leaves, biomass utilization, hybrid cooler).

Of all the countries Israsl chould be the last to downgrade solar energy

DR. JACOB ROSIN Netanye A.

Sir, - Professor A. Radkovsky'o article eppears to be written from the U.S. point of view, eince he states that "large scale generation of electric power from the sun would mean covering many square miles of desert with mirror devices." In our specific case, "large scale power generation" means e few thousand megawatts, and "many square mlles of desert covered hy mirror devices" are reduced to a dozen square kilometres of solar ponds strung out along the coast. The main drawback of solar power is its intermittent oupply and the difficulty of large scale energy storage. This difficulty could be overcome by using the power produced hy the plant for largs scale production of hydrogen by electrolysis. As to nuclear power, it could be attractive if the uraninm were mined and enriched locally. Any other solution is not likely to enhance our economic independence. N. MALINOV

The case for anew currency

Post Law Editor DORIS LANKIN suggests that changing Israel's currency could have some definite psychological benefits.

FRANCE AND England both hit upon the idea of changing their currencies some time hack. Not heing an economist. I do not know how beneficial this was to their economies. But it must have had some decided edvantages, otherwise their experts would not have edvised it. Why should we not do the same in Israel? That ie, introduce a new pound which would be equivalent to our present 10-pound note.

The obvious advantage of this in Israel would be that we would stop reckoning in thonsands, instead of hundreds, and you may not realize what a difference this would make psychologically, if not economically. For if even a modest apartment is worth IL1m. these days, the result is that tens of thousands of us feel like millionaires. And if we feel like millionaires, then we hegin. perforce, to act like millionaires, with disastrous consequences. And the mors we continue to act like millionaires, the lees prospects are of recovering from our economic mess. We ourselves, of course, are to hlame for living above our means. But it is only human to do so when no one ever speaks in hundreds these dayo without prefixing the sum with that small but ominous word "only." On the other hand, If we could huy our weekly groceries with a IL100 note instead of with IL1,000, then we would otop treating our money with disdaln. We might even re-institute the fast-disappearing hahit of asking how much something costs, hefore deciding to huy lt.

I WOULD LIKE to think that the reason rent is quoted in dollars inead of in pounds is not only that landlords wish to eafeguard themselves against devaluation, but also that they are actually asbamed to ask for thousands of pounds in rent. They feel better asking for a "modest" $300 rather than an exorhitant IL6,000. Reducing this figure by one-tenth might have the salutary effect of ridding us of this dollar complex.

It might also make a hetter impression on our friends ahrosd if we stopped expressing our national hudget in hillions, and confined ourselves to mere millions, however seif-deluding that might actually he. It might also make ordinary citizens like me feel less helpless and desperate if the sums expended hy our government are couched in Imaginable and comprehensible terme, instead of in frightening astronomical dimensions.

In short, if Finance Minleter Ehrlich would reduce us to eizs, we might hegin to feel, and consequentiv to ect, like normal, rational human beings, as we used to do when our State was still young. Furthermore, if a new currency were introduced and the old money called in and exchanged, this might lead to the revelation of come of these black pounds which have not alreedy heen spent on untraceable diamonds and clothes. or on traceable thut for some obecure reason not traced) Mercedes-Benzes, villas and trips abroad. This is certainly not a negligible consideration. And may I make one final point: Instead of putting a picture of Jabotinsky on a new IL1,000 note, which is reportedly the government's intention, and so turning him into an ineradicable symbol of inflation, it would do hetter to put his picture on the new IL1 note, and so perpetuate his neme in a more fitting end becoming manner

Tomorrow, March 19, 1979 from 12 noon to 4 p.m. against the rise in prices of basic commodities, and against the government's economic policy, which injures the working public and the state economy.

I do not chare Dr. Preminger'e view that "the major problem in areas where breast-feeding is unlversally practised is the lack of adequate supplementary foods." THE THIRD AGE

To the Editor of The Jerusale m Post Sir, -- With reference to Myriam fendelow's letter of February 6. 'Life-line for the old," I wish to point out thet she established in Jerusalem an exemplary organization for old people from the most deprived sectors of society, as she hereelf stresses. She le rightly considered a pioneer in her field and the organization she established through personal devotion deserveo public recognition. On the other hand, the Authority for Pensioneers and the Ageing, estahlished by the Minister of Labour and Social Affairs, has a different constituency. It plans to deal with the prohlems of what is called today the third age. ns mely those healthy peo-ple who can be active in many ways and do not need economic help, but encounter specific problems due to the fact that they have retired. The prohlems are usually different from those faced hy the clients of Life-line to the old and certainly require different means for their solution.

Philip Gillon'e caustic remarks of February 9, about the programme, 'Family Situation.'

As its psychological consultant, I am aware of the principles upon which it is based and also of the attitudes of the people involved in producing it. Among the principles are those of honest and open communication, sensitivity to the needs of othere, the reinforcement of positive attributes (and limits where necessary), the right of each family memher to develop his own personality, and others, all of which attempt to create the kind of family which is the exact opposite of what is intimated hy Gillon's epithets, "odious" and "repulsive."

If Gillon helieves in principle that such a programme should exist, using as a vehicle a more or less typical Israeli family, it would seem legitimste that he criticize its dramatic effectiveness or lite educational purpose, neither of which he has done. Furthermore, if public opinion carries any impact, I am sure that he knows that there has been a very positive reaction to the programme from all segments of the population and that follow-up research has shown it to be among the most popular TV programmes. It also seems to have stimulated conversation among families about how they might deal differently with their day-to-day problems.

It might interest you to know that, in an international meeting in Europe several months ago, the programme was highly praised and the BBC requested it for use in train-ing their educational teams.
